

Supervision interrupts practice.

It wakes us up to what we are doing.

The supervisory voice acts as an irritator interrupting repetitive stores and facilitating the creation of new stories.

Shelia Ryan

We need someone who encourages us when we are tempted to give it all up, to forget it all, to just walk away in despair. We need someone who discourages us when we move too rashly in unclear directions or hurry proudly to a nebulous goal. We need someone who can suggest to us when to read and when to be silent, which words to reflect upon and what to do when silence creates much fear and little peace.

About me

I, Elizabeth Lee, am a supervisor in training with Transforming Practices, Inc. a recognised training program of AAOS (Australasian Association of Supervision). While in training, I am being supervised by supervisor-trainers within Transforming Practices, Inc. who are recognised supervisor-trainers with AAOS.

I have been married nearly 40 years, have three adult children and a granddaughter. I am a trained spiritual director, pastoral theologian, chaplain, educator and scientist. I enjoy bushwalking, contemplative photography, reading, vegetarian cooking and accompanying people on their journey.

If you would like to discuss Professional Pastoral Supervision with me please phone or email.

... SUPERVISION

What is Professional Pastoral Supervision?

Supervision is a relational reflective learning experience in which you, as supervisee, are encouraged and supported to reflect upon your professional practice with the encouragement and support of me, the supervisor. In particular, supervision allows one to pay attention to inner experiences evoked and to grow in awareness of healthy and unhealthy, helpful and unhelpful, reactions and responses and hence inform future practice.

“Every success story is a tale of constant adaption, revision and change.”

Richard Branson

While supervision may from time to time offer the opportunity for consultation, guidance, teaching and mentoring, these are not the focus of supervision. Supervision contributes to the wellbeing through social and emotional support and cultivates professional resilience.

I offer a creative, safe and courageous space as well as foster an empowering relationship which can open new possibilities in your work. I hope that as a result you become more effective, satisfied and open to your potential. It is my desire that you will enjoy the process of supervision and flourish professionally and personally.

Roles and Responsibilities?

As your supervisor I will take responsibility for: listening attentively and compassionately; offering and receiving feedback; monitoring the quality of our relationship; fostering and safe and courageous space; monitoring ethical practice; suggesting resources; making referrals if appropriate; sharing my skills, expertise and experience; and time keeping.

As supervisee you will be responsible for: preparing for our sessions; presenting your works and relevant issues; reflecting on your work during the session; clarifying your learning objectives; implementing your learning from supervision in your subsequent practice; and providing feedback on how supervision is for you.
